Prayer for Joy
by Stuart Kestenbaum, Maine’s Poet Laureate

What was it we wanted to say anyhow, like today
when there were all the letters in my alphabet soup and suddenly the ‘j’ rises to the surface.
The ‘j’, a letter that might be great for Scrabble, but not really used for much else, unless
we need to jump for joy,
and then all of a sudden it’s there and ready to help us soar and to open up
our hearts at the same time,
this simple line with a curved bottom,
an upside down cane that helps us walk in a new way into this forest of language, where all the letters
are beginning to speak, finding each other in just
the right combination
to be understood.

Nonprofits are the embodiment of a community. One would be hard pressed to find anyone who has not been influenced in some way by a nonprofit. They feed, heal, educate, and nurture everyone on this Island, directly or indirectly. Nonprofits give purpose and empowerment to individuals and families daily. They promote the common good, stimulate the economy, lead through innovation and respond in times of trouble. Nonprofits are managed almost entirely by volunteers who give of their time and energy daily.

The Chamber dedicates this Island Guide to all of our nonprofits and to the volunteers who are selfless in their commitment.

About the photographers

Cover photo: Ann Flewelling has been captivated by visual images of the natural world since childhood. Though formally studying photography and related arts at The Southeastern School of Photographic Arts, The Maine Photographic Workshops and Haystack Mountain School of Crafts, Ann has been engaged in informal study since childhood, driven by curiosity and an inclination for active experimentation. By high school she had begun exploring microphotography of snow flakes, a fascination evolving into a science fair project that ultimately took her to compete in the state science fair. Today she shows her digital photography in Maine shops, galleries, and other venues. A practicing clinical psychologist and native Mainer, Ann lives with her husband, Charles Read, along the shore of the Bagaduce River.

Back cover photo: George Larrabee has lived in Stonington and Deer Isle his whole life. He is a self-taught photographer who enjoys taking pictures of nature and of the island he was born and raised on. He enjoys island history and volunteers at the Deer Isle-Stonington Historical Society when he’s needed. Retired from many years of lobstering and clamming, he now enjoys growing tomatoes in his greenhouse and waiting for the perfect sunset.
Welcome to the Island
By Annie Taylor Gray and Lawrence Estey

“They both listened silently to the water, which to them was not just water, but the voice of life, the voice of Being, the voice of perpetual Becoming.”

Hermann Hesse

Welcome to our Island. Our bridge was built in 1939 and before that access was by ferry, and much of life was confined to the island. Though we come and go now, life is still defined by the water that surrounds us. You may ask what occupies and entertains residents and visitors on these 67 square miles of land. It is plentiful and varied and is year round.

Fishing is the dominant industry and Stonington lands the largest number of lobsters on Maine’s coast. Fishing was a summer resource for the Penobscot Native Americans, as well as for early settlers who sustained themselves primarily through farming. Followed by the granite industry of the late 19th century and early 20th, fishing is the backbone of our economy. The Maine Center for Coastal Fisheries is working diligently to make our waters sustainable for the long run. Many year-round residents and natives to Deer Isle are creating new possibilities for the industry by developing scallop, mussel and oyster farms as well as the farming of seaweed.

Fame came to the island as Deer Isle sailors manned the sailing ships that defended the America’s Cup in 1895 and 1899. Our wealth of summer activities include Lobster Boat races, Fishermen’s Day on the pier in Stonington, the Artisans Market and the Tuesday Night Market in Deer Isle and First Fridays in Stonington. In recent years Deer Isle has become a mecca for sea kayakers who paddle among the islands of Merchant’s Row that make up this part of Penobscot Bay.

While artists like John Marin “discovered” Deer Isle in the first part of the 20th century, it was in 1961 that Haystack Mountain School of Crafts moved to the island and every year it draws artists and craftsmen of world renown. Many have settled here and contribute to our culture year-round, opening studios and galleries in Deer Isle and Stonington. In 1999, performing arts came alive when Opera House Arts reopened the 1912 Stonington Opera House and brought a wide variety of productions from Shakespeare to children’s programs, to year-round movies, to music in collaboration with many other Island institutions.

Numerous protected areas feature walking trails through woods, along the shore, and on nearby islands. We like to think of ourselves as one of the most beautiful places in Maine. Look for properties maintained by the Island Heritage Trust, and visit the Deer Isle-Stonington Historical Society to learn more about our history and traditions.

Life moves at a significantly slower pace in the winter months, but it is a time for everyone to regenerate and recharge. It is an opportunity to enjoy more fully all the beauty that surrounds us.

We are, however, not inactive! We consider Deer Isle to be a four-season destination. Winter activities include WinterFest on the third weekend in January, a free family event with fireworks, face-painting, a pickle ball tournament and numerous vendors who gather in the elementary school and on stage at the Reach Performing Arts Center.

The Island Heritage Trust hosts a series of nature-based Winter Walks and Talks and most of their trails are open to hike and some are suitable for cross country skiing. Dogs are allowed on some of the islands; see the list in this Guide.

If physical fitness is on the top of your list, Physique Fitness Center balances the culinary opportunities by offering personal training as well as group classes designed to meet specific needs. Pickle ball is a year-round activity held at the Island Community Center with participants from beginners to experts.

Artists and artisans stay busy all winter long, and a wide range of classes is offered during the summer and into the fall, while artisans sell their crafts at pop-up markets in both Stonington and Deer Isle Village.
The Deer Isle Artists Association is open all year and visitors are encouraged to stop in and meet the artists or participate in monthly discussions. Many of the Island’s galleries are open by appointment in winter.

The Chamber hosts a First Friday event in Stonington. Most businesses are open late, some offer wine and cheese or small bites, and there is music and a lot of it.

We look forward to our summer guests since tourism, along with our thriving local businesses, our artists and the lobstering industry, “floats” our Island. If you are looking for the perfect place to relax and unwind, treat yourself to a visit to Deer Isle. Book a room with a view, have a massage, or indulge in fresh seafood.
We have a coffee shop touted as the “most beautiful in Maine,” credited to Architectural Digest. (Snowflakes in the Guide mark the establishments that are open year-round). The photo opportunities are unparalleled, we have two libraries, two inns and a motel, two of which are open all year and, most importantly, we have an endless supply of local color and charm.

Our Welcome Center is open from mid-May to mid-October. As an added bonus, we have an interactive map and Guide available at deerisle.com.

BuyLocal • HireLocal

The Chamber of Commerce sponsors a two-pronged campaign, BuyLocal and HireLocal, designed to help strengthen and maintain Island businesses and craftsmen, sustain local economic self-reliance and community self-determination. Think local, be local, buy local!

Facts We All Need to Know

1. For every $100 spent at a locally owned Island business, $45 stays on the Island sustaining jobs. That money also helps expand the town’s tax base, in turn lowering individual taxes. For every $100 spent off-island, only $14 remains in our community.
2. Locally owned businesses create more jobs, offer better wages, offer more flexibility to employees and more benefits than national chains offer.
3. Locally owned businesses will bring in specific products if you ask for them.
4. Locally owned businesses donate more money to Island charities, organizations, churches and schools than national chains do. Local business owners are more accessible than executives in large corporations.
5. Local businesses pay taxes, use local banks and local contractors, and shop with other Island businesses. The owners know you, they’re your neighbors.
6. It’s 80 miles round trip to Ellsworth, 125 miles round trip to Bangor. You help our planet by using fewer petroleum products and creating less gas emissions by shopping on the Island. “Think Green.”
7. Successful local business owners can provide real-life inspiration to local students and young people, proving they can stay in Maine and prosper on this Island.

If we don’t shop locally, the stores, restaurants, craftsmen, and pharmacy that we depend on for convenience could slowly disappear.

“If people work together in an open way with porous boundaries, that is, if they listen to each other and really talk to each other, then they are bound to trade ideas that are mutual to each other and be influenced by each other. That mutual influence and open system of working creates collaboration.”

“Volunteers do not necessarily have the time; they just have the heart.”

Elizabeth Andrew
“Consider the humble lobster: an unsightly creature from the sea that tastes awfully good with melted butter. But it turns out that this aesthetically-challenged crustacean is so much more—a charming lover, a belligerent fighter, and a snoopy socializer with a nose that lets it track prey and paramour alike with the skill of a bloodhound. And, perhaps most important, these astonishing animals are a sustainable resource that has provided a livelihood for generations of Maine fishermen.”

Every evening, just before dark comes to Isle au Haut, Phil Alley, Carol Chapin and Gordon Chapin tend the fish weir at Moore’s Harbor.

Floating patiently in their outboard, they watch the water along the southern side of the harbor for fleeting gleams of silver that reveal a school of herring or mackerel swimming to the head of the harbor. Phil Alley reaches into the water with a long slender pole hoping to feel the fish bumping thickly against it. “When you can’t count the number of bumps, you know you have a lot of fish,” he says.

At daybreak the fish, seeking the open sea, will swim down into the pound of the weir following the leads to its narrow gate. The fishermen must be there at daybreak too, to close them in.

Once the fish, perhaps several hundred bushels, are closed into the pound, a purse net is set around them. It is closed from the bottom and drawn up, concentrating the fish into a roiling mass of shivering silver....Large hoses pump the herring aboard the sardine boat, where they are salted and stored in the hold for transport to the mainland. The fish scales are reserved separately for use in costume jewelry and other products.

Built in 1938 by Phil Alley and Ralph Chapin, the weir at Moore’s Harbor is now the only one in operation in this part of Maine. The depth of water in the pound is 25 feet at low tide, 35 feet at high tide. Brush, nailed to two rails along the spiles of the leads, form a solid enough barrier to guide the fish into the pound. Below water level, it is lined with 1,500 pounds of lead-weighted twine, 65 fathoms long and 30 feet deep. This is called a twine reliner because it hangs inside a wall of brush, which prevents heavy seas from damaging the nets. Altogether, over 120,000 square feet of twine are used in the operation of the weir. This twine also requires mending and care [and] all of it must be taken up for the winter. Half is nylon but half is cotton and must be salted to guard against rotting. In addition to all the work of preparation, which takes about six weeks in the spring, the weir requires constant attention from May through November.

Most of the fish trapped in the weir are herring, which must be longer than four inches to be taken for the sardine market. In past years, shad and mackerel used to be caught. Every year, some fish come to Moore’s Harbor, making at least a year’s [worth of work] in some form or other. Now, most of the business is selling herring for sardines. Mackerel are sold, if the market exists, sometimes for canning. During the first year of the weir, Alley and Chapin sold over 1,200 bushels of mackerel for canning in Rockland.
